It seems that everyone loves to know more about the lives of famous people. Knowing the tendency, many newspapers and magazines have been featuring stories about this. However, no one would ever want to let his personal life be publicly available to other people. Hence, from a personal viewpoint, it seems to be inappropriate for a magazine or newspaper to freely publish this kind of private information.

Firstly, everyone has his own secrets. Undoubtedly, he will never want anyone rather than the people he believes to know about these stories. Hence, it will be outrageous for those famous people to lose their privacy.

Secondly, more constructive information should be available on newspapers and magazines. Knowing a famous person’s personal life does not broaden one’s knowledge. For example, a newspaper or magazine should have more information about the current development of its country rather than having a great deal of useless information about a super model’s life.

Last but not least, people should give respects to other people by not disturbing their secrets. As a matter of fact, it is greatly disrespectful when someone tries to disclose another person’s secrets. Hence, it should not be acceptable for newspapers and magazines to publish private and sensitive information of famous people.

In conclusion, it is believed that newspapers and magazines should not be allowed to freely publish personal and private stories of famous people because this is their right to protect their privacy.
