There is a fact in nowadays society that using drugs, legal and illegal, is more and more popular in all kinds of people, including youth, of all cultures. In the sociologists’ view, the ones who have to take responsibility for this situation are parents and older members of society. This essay will take a cautious analysis about this issue in different angles.

To begin with, there are convincing arguments justified for those who support the statement above. First of all, nothing can alter the fact that children are affected the most by their own parents and neighborhood. Living in an environment surrounded by crimes, vices and maniac, committing these faults with innocent children is such a matter of time. Furthermore, in case of remaining a conscious awareness to leave behind these things, their parents rarely can afford the cost of getting them education opportunities and other living conditions.

Likewise, there is another angle of problem. Sins did not emerge from nowhere. They are the result of undeniable weakness of society in which they occur. The loose control of authorities leads to poverty, unemployment and long distance between the rich and the poor. These things are the deep down reasons explaining the current bad condition of certain societies. Every society needs a balanced development to reach the high level of stability.

All things considered, I personally think that to deal with these problems, it is necessary to make a significant change in the awareness of citizens. This could only happen with great financial and cognitional helps from the authorities and all members of society.
