Nowadays environmental problems are too big to be managed by individual persons or individual countries. In other words, it is an international problem. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Give reasons for your answer and include any relevant examples from your own knowledge or experience.

You should write at least 250 words.

Today mankind has seen numerous developments brought by industrial revolutions and new technology in different aspects of life. However, these rapid changes are causing serious negative effects. Undoubtedly, environmental issues such as pollution are clear examples of the disadvantageous effects of this development. The causes of this problem and the possible solutions to remedy these effects will be analyzed in this report.

Perhaps pollution is one of the most heated problems that the whole world is suffering from. There are many reasons that lead to the pollution around the world. The most important reason is the waste disposal from various factories. For instance, many factories get rid of their trash by burning or burying it under the ground or throwing it into the ocean. These wastes can in turn produce carbon dioxide (CO₂), greenhouse gas or other chemical substances. Consequently, these pollutants affect not only the people working in the factories, but also the climate and other creatures.

Furthermore, burning fossil fuels by vehicles is another principal cause of pollution. It can be seen that many overpopulated places have the highest rate of air pollution. This is because of millions of cars that run on the road every day which in turn produce a huge amount of the harmful gases. For example, places such as Sao Paulo and Mexico City are the busiest cities over the world and they have severe, deadly air pollution.

In order to address the possible solutions of the above issues, the authority as well as the individuals have major roles to cope with this problem. Firstly, governments ought to conduct long and short-term strategies of solutions ranging from reducing waste disposal of factories to encouraging the public transportation to reduce the air pollution. Secondly, people who are careless about the environment should change their attitude and pay more attention to the influences beyond the environmental issues.

In my point of view, the preservation of environment is the responsibility of all of the governments, individuals and the communities. Thus, finding out beneficial alternatives is going to tackle the issues that have negative impacts on the environment in the foreseeable future.
